Civic Mass Meeting Next Monday Night At Ocean Theatre

PUBLIC PRESENTATION OF FACTS AND FIGURES ABOUT PLAYGROUNDS

Arrangements have been made by a committee of progressive citizens for a civic mass meeting to be held at the Ocean Theater next Monday night, Oct. 26 at 8 o'clock for the purpose of endorsing the recent favorable action of the city council in the playground proposition at Ocean Beach. Facts and figures concerning the civic center improvement will be presented by such prominent authorities on the subject as Tam Deering, superintendent of the city recreation bureau and well known worker in the Community Service field; Edgar F. Hastings, member of the Board of Education and a sterling Point Loma booster; Miss Althea Warren, city librarian, and others familiar with the advantages of the present playground movement. All citizens are invited and parents are particularly requested to be in attendance.

Seashore Esplanade

RETAINING WALL PLANNED FOR WATER FRONT SEVEN BLOCKS LONG

Under a petition being circulated the city council will be asked to authorize proceedings for the construction of a retaining wall along Ocean boulevard, also for the paving of that boulevard from the foot of Newport avenue to Voltaire street. The boulevard at present exists in name only, but it is stated that the improvement would create one of the finest scenic drives in the city, affording for its entire length an unobstructed view of the ocean.

The value of the adjoining property would be greatly increased by the building of the retaining wall, the cost of which would be probably assessed against adjacent property.

CARNIVAL COMING

FIRST WEEK IN NOVEMBER

FOR RAISING FUNDS

Councilman Louis Mair announces that additional funds for the completion of the new municipal pier at Mission Beach are expected to be obtained from a percentage of the revenues of a carnival to be held in the first week of November under the auspices of Esco Ives.

The Abner L. Kline shows have been engaged and the carnival will be given on the vacant lots at Eighth and I streets.

Councilman Mair states that all San Diegans interested in the new pier should patronize the carnival and that the money obtained, added to what he already has, will go a long way toward completing the pier. Personal subscriptions to the pier fund are still solicited by Councilman Mair and the committee in charge.

OLD "SPANISH" LIGHT

By Winifred Davidson

This spot whereon we stand, Point Loma Light,
Marks ground which on old Spanish maps was known
As California—this high headland, blown
Unto vast winds and seas and skies. At night
A lift of gloom upon a fainter gloom; but bright
It towered by day, with burning poppies sown;
A mass of rock against the blue vault thrown;
A giant finger beckoning this lone height.

Hark! You shall hear old musics, echoing, beat Upon returned old laughter. There shall glide
Light dancers. Hear you the quick small feet
Where Spanish caballeros to this dooryard ride?

Only the surf where bay and ocean meet?
Naught but a crying gull? A moaning tide?

33 Cents A Year For Playgrounds

Three San Diego neighborhoods, Ocean Beach, Emerson and Logan Heights, have launched movements to secure playgrounds through local assessment. The people of Ocean Beach have three times petitioned the city council to secure an election in their district to establish a civic center at the present elementary school site, which would include the school, branch library, parking features, auditorium and playground.

The council, upon the advice of the city attorney, has decided to place the playground proposition upon the same footing as street improvements and other like civic matters, and last Monday the city manager was directed to proceed with the work of outlining the assessment district to be affected by the proposed improvement.

As there are approximately 6000 lots in Ocean Beach, it will require an assessment of $3.33 per lot to raise $20,000 necessary to procure the entire block lot by joining the present Ocean Beach school ground. SPREAD OVER A PERIOD OF TEN YEARS, THIS AMOUNTS TO ONLY 33 CENTS PER YEAR.

By raising $20,000 through local assessment, the people of Ocean Beach plan ultimately to procure a civic center valued at approximately $200,000. The first unit of the civic center, the elementary school, has already been established, and is valued at $89,000 for building and 2.4 acres of land. It is anticipated that a branch library building valued at $15,000 will quickly be procured when the people of Ocean Beach are able to offer a site on the civic center grounds for the location of the branch library building.

The school attendance has increased 35 per cent in the past two years. At this rate of increase, the present school enrollment of 460 will increase to more than 900 in a period of six years. This will require doubling the present school buildings. Ultimately an auditorium must be provided for the school. At the urgent request of the people of Ocean Beach, the board of education agreed, as its part in the development of the civic center project, to procure additional land for building and playground purposes, within the block now occupied by the school. Two thousand dollars has been provided by the Harmon foundation toward the playground.

The cost of improvement of the playground, which must be borne by the city and the board of education, must be $1700 as required by the Harmon foundation. All of these improvements, it is contemplated, will approach the figure of $200,000 and the original cost would be only 33 cents per year per lot for a period of ten years assessed upon 6000 lots.

The municipal playground commissioners and the board of directors of Community Service, which have been co-operating with neighborhoods in working out plans for local civic centers, point out the fact that of the five municipal playgrounds, only two—the University Heights and Rosepark, which together are only approximately four acres of land—have been purchased by the city. Except for a small portion of the University Heights playground, no playground area has been acquired over a period of approximately ten years.

The opportunity to secure a general bond issue for playgrounds being remote, due to necessity of voting water bonds, the Ocean Beach, Emerson and Logan Heights districts have concluded to wait no longer, but to procure necessary land for school, park and playground purposes in connection with their school sites, by local assessment.

"It is the only way that we can get any playground in our district," is the explanation offered by the leader in one of these districts. "If we act now we can get a little land in conjunction with our elementary schools that is unimproved. If we wait, even two or three years, this land will be improved and the cost prohibitive. The result will be that our school children will be in the same situation as prevails at Washington, Franklin, Logan, Lincoln and other schools, where children have to play in the dangerous streets at the peril of their lives."

Remember Nov. 17th! Shirley cottage at 7:30 p. m. Old-fashioned "box social" for the benefit of the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce advertising fund. Wear old-fashioned clothes of the gingham gown and overall costumes will do. Dress for "fun" and help make it. Ladies, do up a box for two with your name inside. Let the gentlemen come with their spare change and bid for their dinner partners.

Don't forget to connect up every building with the new sewer. Let's be modern and boost the growth of our community. It helps each and every one to bring in new residents through obtaining every convenience for our property.

Mrs. L. E. Anderson, formerly Marguerite Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hunt, with her two talented and beautiful children, Maxine and Donna, are settled at last in Miami, Florida, where Mr. Anderson has been for some time arranging accommodations for his family. "Rentals and living are terribly high in Miami," writes Mrs. Anderson. "We are located in the Norton Apartments, which are larger than any apartment building in San Diego, and the rentals range from $350 to $550 per month for each five-room apartment. San Diego people are in luck with such reasonable rentals. They should stay there and be satisfied, for of course this is only a 'Florida boom' and the crowded condition makes living in all respects so unreasonable. We are here until Mr. Anderson gets through selling Florida—not buying—and then we will be on our way back home to California again."

Carr Bros.' Orchestra Switches Next Week To Mission Beach

FAMOUS MUSICIANS AT O. B. DANCE PAVILION ENGAGED FOR CASINO

It is learned by "The Beach News" from an absolutely reliable source that the famous Carr Brothers Orchestra will close their long and successful engagement at the Ocean Beach Dance Pavilion this Sunday night, Oct. 25, and will transfer their musical activities next Tuesday night to the Mission Beach Casino, where they will take the place of the present Cliff Webster aggregation. Rumors of the change have been current for some time, and, with the ascendancy of the Carr Brothers to the musical throne at the Mission Beach Casino, it is pre-saged that their wonderful organization will be greatly augmented and perfected to the point of making it the finest dance orchestra on the Pacific coast.

Arrangements are being made by Manager William E. Benbough for securing another excellent orchestra at the Ocean Beach Dance Pavilion, where a change in policy is announced for the winter season. The pavilion will be open only on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays until further notice. With the forthcoming inauguration of the radio broadcasting service in San Diego, it is very likely that Manager Benbough's new dance orchestra will furnish musical programs during special week days and nights.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NECESSARY ADJUNCT TO O. B. PUBLIC SCHOOL

"More than 50 per cent of the use of the branch library will be by the children of the Ocean Beach school, and therefore it should be located adjacent to the school grounds," according to a statement made by MISS ALTHEA WARREN, city librarian, at the Ocean Beach mass meeting held last spring to inaugurate the civic center and playground movement.

S. D. A. & N. Academy

New students who have recently arrived at the San Diego Army and Navy Academy in Pacific Beach include Zuazua of San Diego and Reeves, late of Washington, D. C., son of Capt. J. M. Reeves, U. S. N., and a cousin of James T. Watkins of San Francisco, honor graduate of last year.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rankin of Laguna Beach, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Burr of Los Angeles, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Goree, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. Baldwin of San Diego, were visitors lately.

The recent junior banquet given was the largest affair of its kind ever given for the school. Maj. Davis was toastmaster, and speeches were made by Arthur Johnson of Santa Monica, president of the class, and several others.

Wallace A. Anderson has received news of the death of his father, Charles Anderson, who passed away at Bellingham, Wash. Cadet Anderson left immediately for Los Angeles to join his mother and sister. All the school extends sympathy to the bereaved family.

The latest addition to the faculty, Lieut. Henry B. Wells, comes from Los Angeles to take the place of Lieut. Joseph L. Keeney, who leaves because of ill-health. Lieut. Wells is a graduate of Middlebury college, Middlebury, Vt., and did post-graduate work at the University of Redlands.

The academy enjoyed a week-end holiday on the occasion of the football game at Los Angeles between the Loyola Preparatory school and the academy team. The score was 39 to 0 in favor of the academy. While the boys are rejoicing over their victory, they greatly regret the injury to one of their number, Lieut. Coger, who suffered a severe fracture of the leg, and will be incapacitated for several weeks.

The suit and warrant are the aftermath of a week-end party when the marchesa said her jewels were taken.

Community Building

Any Attention Paid to Lawn Is Fully Repaid

Thoughtful builders always save the top six or eight inches of soil excavated and use it as a top dressing over the remainder of the lawn. The more fertile, of course, a lawn can be made the quicker and better the grass and other plantings will grow.

One of the best methods for improving the fertility of a lawn is by the application of well-rotted stable manure. Frequent top dressings with a good complete fertilizer add much to the fertility of a lawn.

Old lawns, if the weeds and coarse grasses have driven out the finer velvety grasses, may be improved much by plowing or spading the sod, turning it under to a depth of eight or ten inches, following this by a thorough cultivation, and then reseeding at the rate of one to two bushels of June grass to one to two bushels of red top, and eight pounds of white clover per acre. Some of the commercial lawn mixtures may be substituted for this mixture with less trouble. A smooth, well-sodded lawn can be obtained in two or three years by frequent clipping.

For the average person wishing to beautify a lawn, the suggestion to study carefully lawns laid out and landscaped by experts as well as home-planned lawns is well worth while. Many useful ideas can thus be picked up and applied.

To Co-Ordinate Ideas for City Beautifying

Bringing the most foresighted ideas in city planning and regional planning to focus through the tests of practicability and experience will be the purpose of a newly formed joint committee on the establishment of standards in subdivision planning and subdivision control, which will represent the National Association of Real Estate boards, the National City Planning conference and the American Institute of City Planning.

Ireneau Shuler of Omaha is chairman of the committee of the National Association of Real Estate boards authorized by the directors of the association to co-operate with similar committees of the planning organizations to make possible unification of effort of the specialist in city planning with the realtor who is actually engaged in the work of city building. The joint commission will study methods of controlling growth of new residential and industrial areas, particularly of areas contiguous to cities but outside their corporate limits.

Have Fixed Plan for City

Greater value may be derived from a plot of ground that is to be developed for building purposes, providing a comprehensive plan is first prepared. The adoption of a limited number of styles of architecture to be employed is the next step to be determined. The village or community idea embodies a comprehensive plan and a protective one. The purchaser of a home in this sort of development is then assured of a house equal or better than his own and, in addition, enjoys the privilege of cementing a closer friendship with his neighbors. Such a home-owner will naturally evidence a keen desire to do his share towards the proper care of his own particular unit in the village. Quaint winding streets or roads, properly shaded with trees and dotted with ornamental lamp standards and sign posts, at once impart an air of distinctiveness to a community. Comparing such an arrangement with the usual stereotyped right-angle intersections of roads found in most communities makes one wonder why the village idea was not developed long ago. Then, too, a great deal of thought and study is required for a proper landscape treatment of a village; this, in itself, is a most important factor in the success or failure of the undertaking.—Philadelphia Ledger.

City Looks to Future

Durham's (N. C.) new source of municipal water supply, situated on the Flat river above the present site will be provided by a modern dam which will impound sufficient water to make the city free of the fear of drought for years to come, even considering the rapid growth of population and industry which will require water far beyond the present amount of supply. In determining to spend liberally for the provision of this fundamental civic equipment, the city has also given much thought to the future and is seeking scientific advice in the acquisition of data, so that when the problems arise the facts will be obtainable upon which to cope with them.

Provide for Soft Water

One of the requirements of houses in suburban villages, particularly those whose source of water supply is an artesian well, is soft water.

Hard water has its uses, and to be frank, they are many, but when the housewife wants to turn out a dainty job on her personal garments, or for the table linen, there is nothing like soft water to do the work. Clothes washed in soft water turn out much whiter and snowier than those washed in hard water.

HELD AT WINDOW, THREE-YEAR-OLD SEES FATHER DIE

Baby's Farewell to Parent Pathetic Aftermath of World War.

Indianapolis.—The death of a World war veteran in the government tuberculosis hospital in the hills of Kentucky, as described from personal observation by Mrs. Jane Williams, was declared by national headquarters of the American Legion here to be typical of 15 that occur in the United States every day.

It is for such disabled veterans, their widows and orphans, that the Legion and leading citizens are now raising the national American Legion endowment fund.

Mrs. Williams' story of the death is in part as follows:

"The best excuse for my story is that it is true, every word of it. At the little hotel where I was living in the town near the big government hospital in the Kentucky hills, I first met Julie, a pale wisp of babyhood, three years old, and Julie's mother, Julie's mother, one of the 'hospital widows' at the hotel, was the type of wife whose husband calls her 'Babe.' She was a clinging little creature, pretty and so dependent, with but two great points of interest in her life—Julie and Buddy. Buddy was Julie's father who lay in the hospital.

Plans to See Baby.

"You know, or possibly you don't know, that children are never permitted in the tuberculosis hospitals. They may be brought to see their fathers in the recreation hall but never in the wards. That made it hard for Buddy, who was a bed patient. Babe came to see him twice every day when she could find some one to care for Julie, but his longing to see Julie was a physical pain that grew stronger as his poor, burned-out body grew weaker.

"One day he decided to slip to the recreation hall to see Julie just for a few minutes. So we took her there, all dressed up and pink with excitement at the prospect of seeing her daddy. When he came in, the hill breeze whipping his bathrobe around his thin legs, I knew his visit with Julie would cost him several months of his life. We four were alone in the hall and the instant his eager eyes rested on Babe with Julie in her arms, I turned away. You can't decently look at a man's bare heart when his weakness keeps him from covering it up.

Selfish to Give Up Fight. "Buddy would have been glad to give up the fight for himself."

"But there was Julie and Babe—" "Can't do it sister," he whispered to me one day after a frightful hemorrhage, "can't sneak off like a quitter and leave Babe to fight it out alone. I'll get well yet."

"One midnight the message came for me to get a taxi and bring Julie out to the hospital. I knew what that meant. Buddy was refusing to die without seeing his baby. It was pouring down rain; the wind was blowing; Julie was frightened and so was I. It seemed so useless to take her out there, because under no circumstances would she be permitted in the ward, even in a case like this.

"We arrived about two o'clock. A Red Cross worker met me and said they had rolled Buddy's bed over against the window and we could hold Julie up for him to see. The Red Cross woman held the baby while I went into the dimly lighted ward and tiptoed to the screen that surrounded Buddy's bed. His eyes flared open when he saw me and he tried desperately hard to smile.

"Julie?" he gasped, his eyes begging for her.

"The nurse turned his head toward the window gently and switched on a bright light. A sob shook Buddy's frame, tears blotted out his sight of Julie's face.

"Oh, Babe," he whispered between gasps, "I hate to leave you—like this. Dirty trick. You're—such—a kid."

"A fit of coughing stopped him. It was all over."

English Circuit Brings in U. S. A.

Four-Tube Set That Gives Splendid Results Any Good Radio Night.

Here is a hook-up, writes a Pennsylvania correspondent in Radio Digest, that my friend in England receives America on during any good radio night. He advises that he has tried all the hook-ups and he finds this the best. I hooked my set like it last February and have no trouble getting coast-to-coast reception.

honeycombs in an adjustable coil holder, although other forms and means of coupling can be used. You do not need a potentiometer in this circuit. The filament rheostats give you the same results and you will probably find that you get much louder signals by cutting down the current on the first tube.

For DX work, the detector tube current should be varied for best results. To switch out the last tube (second audio) turn the switch to the right and cut off the rheostat on that tube. When you've become accustomed to handling this circuit I think you will prefer it to anything you've tried. I know we do.

Ohio Fan Explains His Two-Variometer Hook-Up

I am inclosing my favorite single-tube set with which I have obtained exceptional results, writes an Ohio radio fan in Radio Digest. It is easy to operate, there being only one tuning control. Using one tube with an aerial 90 feet long, including lead-in, and a WD-12 tube, I get Calgary, Alberta, Los Angeles, Havana, Hollywood and Portland, Ore. In one week 70 stations were logged.

Two variometers are wound on the same 4-inch cardboard tube. The rotors have a diameter of 3 inches. The stator of the aerial variometer consists of 32 turns of No. 24 dec. copper wire. This is then continued 5 turns on each side of the stator of the plate variometer. The plate variometer has a stator of 32 turns of No. 24 dec. wire and a rotor of 40 turns of the same wire on 3-inch tube. The tuning rotor is 32 turns No. 24 dec. wire on the other 3-inch tube.

The switch in the aerial circuit is closed for long-wave lengths and opened for short-wave lengths. The .002 mfd. phone condenser is connected across the phones and "B" battery, which is 22½ volts. Be sure to connect the tuning rotor to the aerial and the rotor of the plate variometer to the phones.

When Tube Is Short-Circuited

Short-circuited tube elements will cause the tube to light very brilliantly when first turned on. Remove such a tube at once and replace it with a good one, as it might cause others to burn out in set.

THE MONKEY'S REGRET

"The regret of my whole monkey life," said Larry, the monkey in the zoo, "is that I cannot talk to the children in their language."

"Yes, and I'd like to talk to the grown-ups, too. Indeed I would."

"I don't regret that," said Mike, another monkey in the cage with Larry. "I'm too shy to want to talk much."

"I'm not," said Snookums, "but I don't know that I especially want to talk to the children and to the grownups."

"I can make the keeper understand me, and that's enough."

"I can make faces at the children, and they will laugh. I enjoy that."

"And I play with them, and they play with the keeper. I knock off his hat and then the people standing around the cage think it's a great joke."

The keeper knows what I like to eat and what I like to do."

"He knows when I am well and when I am sick, and so why should I want to talk to children and grown-ups?"

"The keeper is a grown-up," said Mike.

"True," said Snookums, "but he is a grown-up who understands. That's all I care about."

"Of course as I said before, I'm too shy to want to talk to people," said Mike.

"I don't even like to play with them. I'm very nervous. But, Larry, you are the friend of every one who comes to the monkey house."

"Tell us why you would like to be able to talk."

"Because," said Larry, "people don't understand us and then they tell children everything quite incorrectly. They say to the children and the children then say to each other:

"See the monkeys. They are horrid and they are very dirty."

"They are scratching themselves. Horrid, unattractive monkeys."

"Then they will watch us perform and laugh at us because they think we're funny."

"We may be funny but we are not dirty. You both know as well as I do that we aren't scratching ourselves because we're horrid and dirty, but because we are so nervous about becoming dirty that we pick off every bit of dust and dirt and sawdust that flies upon us."

"We won't let a scrap of it stay on. And, too, we often eat the salt that is on our bodies. That is good for us, but we're not dirty."

"We're so nervous about being clean and we're so fussy about it that we've gained the reputation for scratching and untidiness."

"I don't wonder now that you wish to have the power to talk the people's language," said Snookums.

"I didn't know people said such things."

"But," said Larry, "every time our good keeper gets a chance he tells people it's not true and shows our clean, white skin to prove this point."

"Many and many the time has he done this."

"Oh, he teaches the people so much they don't know, as he has bothered to find out, and people have a habit of saying something is so when they have nothing in the world to give them reason for saying what they do."

"Poor Larry. No wonder you feel as you do," said Mike.

"No wonder," said Snookums. "How glad I am the keeper does all he can."

"So am I glad," said Mike.

"And you know I am," sighed Larry.

"The Friend of Everyone."

"Otherwise Engaged"

"Sit up an' shake hands, Wover!"

Judy commanded her dog.

Rover didn't obey, and Judy repeated the command several times.

The little boy next door laughed derisively.

"Well, he can do it if he wants to!" Judy championed hotly. "He's just thinkin' of somepin else!"

"Diplomatic Virginia"

Virginia had been left for an hour to visit Aunt Julie's new baby.

Playing with baby soon palled and Virginia turned her mind to more interesting things and in that pursuit said diplomatically to Aunt Julie: "I expect you make the best cookies in the whole world, don't you, Aunt Julie?"

"LOMA LORE"

By WINIFRED DAVIDSON
Point Loma, California

Book rights reserved.

"As we paused upon the dividing ridge to gaze upon a scene so majestic, so far beyond the poet's pen, the painter's art, our friend attracted our attention to the northwest where rose the Santa Catalina and San Clemente Islands, some eighty miles away. And yet so pure and rare the atmosphere they seemed quite near and looked like leviathans rising from out the vasty deep.

"Beneath us near where the breakers dashed against the shore some rusty iron boilers marked the place where once some followers of the Mormon brotherhood delved to find the bed of coal supposed to underlie the mountain and the bay.

"The white sails of the pursuing whaleboats flashed far out upon the ocean, but nearer in among the kelp the smaller boats lay waiting for the whale.

"A short drive up the ridge brought us to the lighthouse upon the 'towering topmost height.' A fence enclosing about an acre and a half surrounds it. Mr. Jenkins, the keeper, met us at the gate and escorted the ladies to the entrance where they were received by his wife. Neatness and order prevailed in the little enclosure. The flower beds surrounded by sulona (abalone) shells, the tidy walks and neatly arranged beds of cultivated earth told at a single glance the story of the taste and industry of these industrious inhabitants of this lonely tower. Beside the walls of the house some tomatoes were just ripening, while well grown potato vines and other garden vegetables luxuriated in the genial sun and cooling breeze.

"The house is strongly built of sandstone and the iron tower rises many feet above the cone; stone steps lead to the entrance door and thence by circling narrow steps the light is gained."

Concerning the Spanish connections through Keepers Keating, Talman, Genau, Wiley, Fields, McAleer and others associated with the service for many years, we can do no better than guess. With the appointments in 1861 of Captain William C. Price and in 1871 of Enos A. Wall and his assistant, Robert D. Israel, a true Spanish atmosphere begins to gather. Price, Wall and Israel were American husbands of Spanish-Californian wives. Their families were as Spanish as Spanish, in many respects: speaking traditional Castilian, eating authentic Spanish food, correctly trained in Spanish manners and customs, dancing Spanish steps, singing Spanish airs, riding in Spanish saddles. Spanish.

As yet I have nothing to tell of William C. Price, beyond what the record says: that he was Keeper of Point Loma light from 1861 to 1867. His wife was Refugia Wall, the daughter of Enos: as Spanish as though her father had never seen New England snows.

Enos A. Wall was born in Freeport in Maine. Old talk makes him one of those captains in charge of one of the hide-houses on La Playa when Richard Henry Dana, Jr. was here in 1836. He is listed on the first of Old San Diego's "First Precinct" roster of electors in 1850. (There were two precincts, of which Point Loma, which then included Roseville, Old La Playa and the Mussel Beds—now Ocean Beach—sixty-nine persons in all.)

Take this Captain Wall therefore for a typical early nineteenth century Yankee adventuring to this Province of California Alta, which had been for more than two centuries the last fringe of the far-flung mantle of Spanish possessions on the Pacific; one of those New England merchants who turned dull business into thrilled romance; one drawn hither by the fur or the hide lure, held here by bright skies... bright eyes... bright prospects of prosperity.

It was a Machado girl, Maria Antonia, who ran into the Old Town Plaza and snatched the lowered Mexican flag from the hands of the Mexican soldiers trembling at the approach of los soldados Americanos in 1864. It was Juan Machado who for forty dollars bought the contents of old Fort Guijarros on January 17, 1840—nine cannons, two of which serviceable, Smythe says and fifty canisters of grape and three hundred balls.

There is a Spanish flavor about the inaccuracy of the spelling of the Yankee names. You will find it everywhere among the private papers, real estate transfers, diaries, personal narratives. You feel sure that it was a Spanish hand that Timanus for McManus on the old report of building of Point Loma light, just as in South America the liberator O'Donohue because Odonohu—and most Spanish indeed in this disguise. "Bob" Israel is Israel on the record, you noticed. Isabel, Ysbel, elsewhere I have found him.

Henry C. Israel lives across the bay on Coronado. He married Juana Machado's daughter and is able therefore to continue the old Spanish traditions of the Point Loma light authentically. He says:

"I was eight years old when my father went into the lighthouse service. San Diego (Old Town) was but a small place and the life out there on the Point was rather humdrum. Our means of communication with the town was by sailboat. I remember that there were only two houses at La Playa. I remember the date when my father went to the lighthouse for the first time. That was June 14, 1871. My brother was born that morning."

"BUNNY" MURRAY

IN HARNESS AGAIN

Charles E. Murray, popularly known as "Bunny" Murray and former publisher and editor of the East San Diego "News", has felt the "urge" again after a brief retirement and is now publishing a monthly paper entitled the "San Diego County News." The first issue appeared October 1 and was a very commendable edition, indeed. "Bunny" has the able assistance of his wife in the management of the new journalistic enterprise. Heartly congratulations are extended by "The Beach News" upon their splendid response to the lure of printers' ink.

FACTS AND FIGURES

CONCERNING OUR COMFORTS

Under no other government in the world have the masses of the people been given such equal opportunities as in the United States of America.

With 16,337,605 electric light and power customers, 15,000,000 automobiles, 14,000,000 telephones, 9,000,000 phonographs and 3,500,000 radios, 110,000,000 Americans enjoy more of these modern conveniences, than the peoples of all other countries combined.

What we consider necessities are usually classed as luxuries by the rest of the world.

It is not just by chance that America has such things in the largest quantities for common use.

It is here and here only that the individual enjoys the greatest freedom for developing ideas, energy, ambition and initiative.

The result has been a growth unprecedented in the world's history.

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES CITY

MANAGER TO OUTLINE

ASSESSMENT DISTRICT

Acting in accordance with a suggestion by the city attorney relative to the proposed assessment for a public playground at Ocean Beach, the council last Monday authorized City Manager Rhodes to proceed with the plans for outlining the district to be affected by the recreation improvement as submitted.

Under the present plan, it is stated that no election will be held on the subject, the assessment proposition being put through in the same manner as a street proceeding, unless substantial protests are entered, when a full hearing would be afforded by the council.

Coach Paul Prehn's Mat Teams Have Good Record

Undisputed championships in 1920 and 1922, ties for title in 1924 and 1925—24 wins against 3 defeats—that is the remarkable record of Illinois' wrestling team under Coach Paul Prehn in six seasons in the Big Ten.

Prospects for 1926 are excellent. Seven out of nine letter men will answer Coach Prehn's call. Lutheringer, a Petersburg boy, who won four falls as a 185-pounder this year, and Barnes, of Champaign, middleweight, are the only letter men to graduate.

Prehn started with only three veterans, all in the lightweights. He developed men to fill the gaps in the heavyweights, and the Illinois triumphed over Purdue, Chicago, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio, losing to none, and tying Indiana for the title.

Tosetti of Nokomis took care of the 115-pound class in most of the meets, but Shaw of Chicago pushed him all season and wrestled in the Purdue meet. Captain Kenney, 125-pounder from Loda, kept his slate of two seasons clear, winning all his bouts. Captain-elect Mathis of Bloomfield won all his bouts and never having had an opponent "behind" him on the mat. He wrestles in the 145-pound class. Gels, a sophomore middleweight from Enid, Okla., won all his bouts, three by falls. A. F. Schultz of Geneseo was the best light-heavy, and C. A. Brown of Cissna Park led heavies.

MARK BEACH RETURNS FROM EXTENDED TRIP TO INDIANA

After an absence of about three months, Mark L. Beach has returned from Valpariso, Indiana, where he was called last July to attend the obsequies of his brother, who passed away rather suddenly while on a vacation trip to Quebec, Canada. The return journey from Valpariso was made by auto over the Santa Fe trail and Mr. Beach and his party experienced rather "rough sledding" in some sections amid bad weather of all sorts. Mr. Beach says he is mighty happy to be back again in sunny Southern California and has resumed the management of his Chicken and Waffle Shop at the Mission Beach Amusement Center, which was excellently conducted by his wife during his enforced sojourn in Indiana. Mr. Beach and his family reside at 824 Jamaica court, Mission Beach, where they have a comfortably appointed home, purchased last spring when Mr. Beach secured a long lease of his business establishment in the big bathhouse building on the esplanade.

DOES DAILY DUTIES WITH AN ELECTRIC PAD PINNED TO DRESS

Almost with the first penetrating blast of the fall winds many of us begin to suffer with mild attacks of neuritis, which, if permitted to take hold and develop, will continue to harass one throughout the winter. Writing for "The Beach News" the famous author, Sarah Ellen Dodge, states that some folks are content to look for a cure in external lotions, salves and plasters whereas she places all her faith in the efficacy of an electric pad which bakes or literally cooks the affection away. She states that she does not claim an instantaneous cure for the electric heating pad, particularly when one has suffered with neuritis for several years, but asserts that if persisted in, the continuous, even heat of the pad will eventually rid one of pain altogether.

She adds: "My particular form of this ailment is what physicians call 'vocational neuritis.' So the moment I feel even a suggestion of pain in my shoulders or neck,—usually the seat of the ailment,—out comes my electric heating pad. This does not necessarily mean I must go to bed or lie down. I simply pin the pad to my dress and go about my daily duties plugging the pad in a nearby electric outlet and use an extra length of cord, about ten feet in order not to limit the area of my activities."

CARE OF CONVALESCENT IN SUMMER

For those who are just recovering from a serious illness the problem of food is a serious one. The patient, though well on the road to recovery, is usually weakened by the rigors of disease and the excessive heat is wont to sap his energy. Hence, the foods that are consumed during this period should be considered carefully as to digestibility, food value, ease of assimilation, purity and sterility. These are important in any food but especially so when the consumer is not strong and healthy.

In most cases, the one who is convalescing consumes milk in large quantities. This food contains all of the elements that are essential to the body. If milk is pure and germless, it is easily digested and assimilated.

Where the milk supply is uncertain or the quality not of the best, evaporated milk should be employed. It is sterile; it is just pure milk with about sixty per cent of the water removed. Its double richness may be modified, if desired, by the addition of water or it may be used just as it is, where rich, creamy dishes are desired.

Many people make the mistake of confusing evaporated milk with condensed milk. They are not at all similar in appearance, composition or taste. They cannot be used for the same purposes; condensed milk is a combination of sugar and milk; evaporated milk has no added sugar, being pure milk of double-rich quality and food value.

Following are recipes of easily prepared dishes and foods that are well suited for the invalid and the convalescent.

Loganberry Cream.
½ cup evaporated milk ½ cup loganberry juice
Pinch salt 2 tbsps. lemon juice
Pinch salt

Put all ingredients in a Mason fruit jar and shake thoroughly. Chill and serve in glasses filled ¾ full of ice chips. Raspberry, blackberry, and cherry juice may be used instead of the loganberry.

Iced Cocoa.
3 tsp. cocoa milk diluted
3 tsp. sugar with
¼ cup water ¼ cup water
Pinch salt ¼ cup evaporated ¼ tsp. vanilla

Mix cocoa and sugar thoroughly and add the ¼ cup water and boil over a low flame for 15 minutes. Scald the diluted milk and add cocoa syrup and salt. Continue cooking for 15 minutes in double boiler. Add vanilla. Chill and serve with whipped ice. Top with whipped cream.

VIOLET AND GOLD

Reported by Sam Lipsett

The regular meeting of Boy Scout Troop 29 was called to order at 7 p. m. Friday, Oct. 9. Three new applicants were present, and were instructed to have their tests ready, so that they could be admitted to the troop in the near future.

After roll-call, the business part of the meeting came up. All tenderfoot and second-class scouts were urged to pass their tests and become first class. Almost everyone of the first class scouts have one or more merit badges ready, and at the next court of honor in San Diego, Troop 29, will have a prominent part.

Scoutmaster W. S. Dunn told the value of the "daily dozen," and gave a few examples of the most beneficial exercises.

Patrol No. 3 gave their patrol yell, and the rest of the patrols are expected to follow them, and have their yells ready soon. Money is being raised for a troop flag, and although only $1.45 is at present in the possession of the treasurer, the needed sum is expected to be raised shortly.

After the meeting a "Kangaroo court" was held, with Harold Belmont presiding.

All members, and anyone interested, are particularly asked to be present at the next meeting, as important business will be held.

TRAINING FOR LEADERSHIP

Fort Rosecrans is to be the scene of an interesting Scouting camp to be held today and tomorrow, Oct. 24 and 25, for the instruction of first-class scouts. Upon satisfactorily completing this course scouts will receive patrol leaders' certificates which will entitle them to attend the Reserve Officers' Training camp in February and obtain a commission in the Boy Scout Officers' Reserve.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

FALSE NOTIONS

AS WE advance along the highways and byways of life and gather a little knowledge on our journey toward the sunset, we become more appreciative of the mute things all about us, seemingly trying to tell us in which direction we should go.

There are signs everywhere along the way telling us how to avoid the crooked paths and to abstain from base capitulations.

The wild flowers, the sunlight, the silver streams, the golden fields of grain, all whisper a story of patience and content which we may learn by close observation and deep reflection.

We tire of the accumulation of material, toys and golden baubles with which we play a little while and throw away in disappointment; we become weary of songs and shows and deceits as the scales fall from our eyes and long for quietude which is always elusive.

But what has been done over and over again since the beginning of time will continue to be done with few variations until the end of the world, quite regardless of the friendly call of nature, or the teachings of the sages and philosophers.

Youth is slow to learn except by hard experience.

It marches out "great ideas," and puts them through strict drills, until it is shocked and shaken to the heart-core to find that millions of people in the years dead and buried, have been led astray by similar delusions.

The young are creatures of dreams; the old are victims of stern realities.

The commanding emotions of the young man and woman, like impulsively formed preferences, their easy likes and dislikes, are but the warp and woof of a fabric, which the experienced worldly travelers have thrown aside in disgust.

After all that is said and done, life in a large measure is a horrible nightmare, whose dawns and evenings produce nothing but sorrow and regret, or a beautiful existence, if we so make it, which we may enjoy every hour to the end of our brief earthly journey.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT REYNOLDS?

THIS is one of the most interesting names in the history of name formation. It comes from an old Teutonic personal name, signifying strength in counsel. It is the word from which the French Reynard or fox was derived and it is the word from which the names Reynolds, Reynard, Reynell, Reynoldson and corresponding names in German and French are derived.

In the sixteenth century there lived a Biblical scholar in England, called Rainolds, and sometimes Reynolds. He is interesting, not only because of the work that he did, but because his name shows the transition from one of the older forms to the modern and accepted form of today.

In this country the name has been distinguished by soldiers; of course its distinguished bearer in any country was Sir Joshua Reynolds, usually considered the most celebrated of any English portrait painter.

THE HEART OF DAVY CROCKETT

By FRANK WAITE

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

IT WAS A hot day in north Texas. The blistering rays from the sun seemed focussed, as if with a huge sun-glass, upon that particular spot on the earth's surface. Under the great shed where the Lothrop-Armstrong Lumber company each day saved up a thousand logs, the roaring, hissing boilers, the pounding engines, and the screaming saws made a perfect inferno on earth. Five hundred negroes, in white canvas breeches and heavy brogans, worked like battling giants, while the cooling streams of perspiration trickled down their brown bodies, bare to the waist.

At one end of the shed two men strained at a lever, and a monster peccan log slipped down upon the saw carriage that lay waiting. The foreman shook his head.

"That's a big one," he shouted in the ear of George Lothrop, senior in the firm.

"Yes," said Lothrop. "Somehow I don't like to see that log cut. Stood for 50 years on the old place. I've eaten many a hunk of nuts from it. We boys named it Davy Crockett," he added, reminiscently. "Yes, that's Davy Crockett. Saw in good condition."

"New one on this alley," the foreman answered.

Lothrop walked over and watched the great disk as it lay idly whirling in its bearings, whining and growling like a beast of prey before tearing into the vitals of its victim. He listened to the sharp click and snap of the belt on its hurried journeyings to the saw and back again to the big drive-wheel in monotonous repetition.

Beneath the saw-gearing was a deep, box-like dust-pit, into which the tiny yellow flakes of wood showered and fell at each side of the flashing plate, like snowdrifts against the window-pane. A bent old man with a long-handled scoop raked together the fluff substance and painfully lifted it over his head onto the pile behind him. The top of the heap crumbled away and slipped back around the man's feet and close up to the saw. The man thrust his scoop into the dust too near the saw, and leaning on its handle, looked up.

With a quick, sharp snarl the saw's hungry teeth ripped through the steel-covered part of the handle, and the man fell to his knees. Lothrop saw the danger, and quickly the shrill signal "Off gear" came from his lips. The old man climbed out, weak and trembling, and the infernal roar began again.

"What's the reason you don't cart that dust away from there?" Lothrop shouted to him.

"Haven't had time, sir," quavered the cracked voice.

"You haven't had time? Then you stay out; I'll put somebody at it who has more time."

"I wish you would, sir," the old man said, as he walked away. "The boy is sick today, and I've been doing what I could when the machine wasn't busy."

"Oh, you're on the planing machine, are you? I didn't know that; I beg your pardon—I didn't understand," said Lothrop, ashamed of his hasty words. "Go back to the planing—I'll shovel while myself."

Lothrop stepped out upon a heavy slab that lay suspended over one corner of the pit, and stood there while the saw passed through the last few feet of the great log. The long waste slab, torn, like flesh of the body, from the trunk it had shielded in the storms of two generations, went rumbling away to the slab-furnace, and the carriage scurried back for another trip to the saw.

Lothrop turned to climb by the ladder into the pit. Suddenly the plank that bore him up slipped, turned, and he fell floundering waist-deep in the treacherous mass below. The sight of the old man's danger a few minutes before was still fresh in Lothrop's mind, and he remembered how impossible it had seemed to shape his tongue and lips for the whistled signal he had given. He wondered if he could make that signal now. He tried—his heart seemed to beat louder than the sound his lips sent forth. He shook himself to steady his nerves. Then he felt a sliding, shoving mass strike his body. Cautiously lifting one foot to the surface he tried to regain the three or four feet he had slipped down the incline. This seemed to loosen the whole surface layer of the pile. Slowly, steadily, he began sliding towards the saw.

In desperation he lunged for the plank he had lost, then fell backward, head foremost. As he went down, his eyes caught one flashing glimpse of the big six-foot saw, and his heart sickened. For a moment he lay perfectly still, or as nearly so as possible, for his whole frame shook in utter horror of what awaited him. His feet lay three feet above his head, and the blood rushed to his brain in maddening torrents. The hard, fine grains of wood filled his eyes and ground and tore the tender flesh. He dared not move now, for every motion meant a slip nearer—steadily, inevitably nearer—to that awful thing!

If he could only see it! He knew that its deadly teeth were not more than a foot away from his head now, for he felt the cold current of air that rushed around with it. For a while the cool wind soothed his throbbing brain. He threw out an arm and groped for something to stay his snail-like career into Death's teeth. With the tips of his fingers he felt the end of the scoop handle that had been snatched from the hands of the old man. Wildly he clutched it—and slipped closer to the smooth, shining surface with the hissing teeth.

Now the cold wind tossed his hair about. Colder and colder it grew, until the boon became a torment. A great chill came over him, and he sneezed. Another slip. Then two more inches, and the chilling current at his head seemed to freeze his very blood. Again a sneeze moved his head a little closer. His dull, bloody eyes gazed up into the free air above. His crazed brain wondered—when? This instant? Perhaps. No; not yet! Maybe now—NOW!

Now, now, now, now, now! mocked the big, throbbing thing.

A heavy jar brought Lothrop to his senses. His brain reeled. He strained his gory eyes to see. The space above was darkening. Then the saw sang out. They were taking another slab from old Davy Crockett!

He cried out—too late! The roar and crash above made his shout a whisper in his own ears. Oh, why didn't he think! Why didn't he call when there was a lull in the noise, when he might have been heard. Too late now! No human possibility could keep his head away from those gnashing teeth while they ate their way through the heart of Davy Crockett. Deep into the soft bed under him he dug his fingers.

"What a fate," he thought, "to have my head split like a block of wood!—my brain, that knows every cog and belt in this complex mechanism, to be ground and scattered in the very dust of its industry!" And the dust came showering and pelted his face. It filled his ears and crept up under his chin. Then his face was covered. When he breathed his nostrils filled. He opened his mouth, and the little wooden flakes choked him. The pounding and rumbling above grew far, far away—further, farther, far—

Under the saw slipped Lothrop's head, and with a fierce, savage shriek, the long, chisel-teeth ripped off the scalp—and stopped!

George Lothrop moved uneasily on his cot. He raised a hand, felt the bandages on his smarting scalp, leaped to his feet, and whistled "Off gear!" When he was quiet again the foreman bent over him.

"It's all right, boss—gear's off," he said. "You see, that disk wa'n't made for sawin' crowsbars; so when it got to that bar it jes' lost a few teeth, and then stopped rightin'."

Lothrop smiled. "It's a good thing we boys selected just that point to drive in that crowbar," he said.

Druggist Was Tasting

Delights of Revenge

It was plain that the druggist was highly pleased. He literally danced up and down between the counters of his splendidly stocked establishment, while on his face was an expression of mirth.

Hearing the bottles rattling merrily on their shelves and feeling strange vibrations in the floor, the assistant appeared from behind the doorway. The peculiar antics that his superior was indulging in caused him great astonishment.

"Gracious me!" he gasped. "Whatever is the matter? Have you taken something or—"

"No," gurgled the druggist. "Oh, dear, no!"

"Then what is the matter?"

"You remember last year when all our water pipes burst on account of the severe frost?"

"Yes, but don't—"

"Well, the plumber who came to mend them has just been in with a prescription for me to make up."

"Well, what if he has?"

"Just this: It's my turn now," replied the druggist, a wicked look in his eye.

Quieter Airplanes

A new research, now yielding significant though secret results, aims to silence the propellers as well as the engines of airplanes.

When an air-engine is silenced the noise of the whirling air-screw, previously drowned by the roar of the motor, becomes penetrating and far-reaching.

The first step, taken recently, was to experiment with propellers having a number of small blades instead of two large ones. The noise-reduction that resulted was appreciable.

The new phase deals with the shape as well as the size of blades. Prolonged tests, closely guarded, now show that by the adoption of certain curves the screw noise can be further lessened. Difficulties are many, but the importance of the quest is great.

Monaco

On one of our voyages to the Mediterranean I saw the most beautiful sight I think I have ever seen. We were approaching the anchorage off Monaco one morning as daylight was coming in. The sun rose right out of the sea and every window in Monte Carlo facing it became a deep crimson for a few moments. This, with the white houses and the snow on the mountains in the background made an effect that was simply indescribable. And only one of our passengers was on deck to see it! Even the sailors, and they are not an emotional class, ceased work to look at it for the few minutes it lasted—"Hull Down," by Sir Bertram Hayes.

Had Lost All Hope of Ever Being Well

Read story of the fight for health and final victory as told by Mrs. James A. Hall, Box 31, Norris City, Illinois.

"About twelve years ago my health failed. I could not eat anything without suffering. I had heartburn, sour stomach, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells, pains in my back and sides and a cough almost like consumption. Nothing helped me. I grew worse and was able to sit up only part of the time. I had lost all hope of ever being any better when someone gave me a Pe-runa book. The book described my case so truly that I began to take Pe-runa. After two and a half bottles I could eat without suffering and improved from then on. I took eight bottles and felt like a new person. That was fourteen years ago. So many diseases are due to catarrh that I think Pe-runa the greatest family medicine in the world."

For more than half a century Pe-runa has been doing just such work as this.

TAKE OFF YOUR "MISTER"

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I CALL him "Mister" when we meet Who never met before, Or the third time on the street, Or the second in the store, If he's the sort of man I like, I drop the "Mister"—now it's "Mike" Or "Bill" or "Bob" or "Jake" or "Jim" Or anything they christened him.

There's some folks who are "Mister" when You meet and when you part, And "Mister" when you meet again— You never seem to start To get acquainted, or to kid, Or act familiar—if you did, You very soon would likely find That they're the—well, the "Mister" kind.

This "Mister"—here's what "Mister" is: It's like the hat you wear, Who ever wore that hat of his Inside and up the stair And at the dining table, too? What would you think of folks who do? Yet there are people full of style Who wear their "Misters" all the while.

Take off your "Mister" when you call At any house of mine!— And hang your "Mister" in the hall When you come here to dine. You're "Mister" maybe on the street But here you're "Frank" or "John" or "Pete."

So, when your overcoat you doff, Please also take your "Mister" off. (© 1925, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

WHO SAID

"Whoever gains the palm by merit, let him hold it."

WHEN Viscount Horatio Nelson, the great English naval officer, uttered these words he might well have been speaking of himself; for Nelson gained the palm through merit and he held it through sheer ability and tenacity, despite the opposition of his rivals. At the age of twelve Nelson entered the British navy and when he died, at the age of forty-seven, he ranked as England's greatest naval commander and strategist. Nelson's first voyage was made as a midshipman on an expedition conducted by Commodore Phipps to explore the polar regions. In the year 1773. In the year 1777—at the age of nineteen—he was made a lieutenant, and two years later he was commissioned a post-captain. When the war broke out with the Republic of France, Nelson was made commander of the "Agamemnon," and he joined with Lord Hood in the campaign in the Mediterranean. He assisted at the siege of Bastia, and at the siege of Calvi he lost an eye in the fighting. For his gallantry at the battle of Cape St. Vincent, in 1797, he was made a rear admiral of the blue and was appointed to the command of the Inner squadron at the blockade of Cadiz. In his next engagement—an attack on the town of Santa Cruz—he lost his right arm.

Nelson was then sent to guard the port of Toulon and watch the French Napoleon slipped past him and reached activities, but in spite of his vigilance Egypt. Thither Nelson followed. After many disappointments he met the enemy in the Bay of Aboukir and decisively defeated them. Later he was instrumental in the restoration of the king of Naples, and upon the completion of a service against the Danes he was created a viscount. After the

Made Study of Necromancy

John Dee was an English mathematician and astronomer; born in London on the 13th of July, 1527. He was educated at Cambridge and spent some time studying abroad and in Holland. He returned to England and held several offices. After 1578 he became interested in necromancy and his philosophical researches were concerned almost entirely with this study. He died in December, 1608, at the age of eighty-one.

FOODS WE LIKE

CABBAGE in the early fall is crisp, solid and good flavored. There are many ways of serving it out of the ordinary.

Stuffed Cabbage.

Select a hard head, cut away the outside leaves, then soak in salted water to dislodge any insects that may be lurking within. Drain, scoop out the center, being careful not to destroy the shape and fill with a forcemeat prepared of a quarter of a pound each of chopped ham and veal, then pound to a pulp, season with salt, pepper, a little minced parsley and a grating of nutmeg, a tablespoonful of chopped green pepper and bind with one-half cupful of bread crumbs and the yolks of two eggs. Tie in a cloth, cover with boiling water and cook until the cabbage is very tender. Place on a hot chop plate, serve cut into wedge-shaped pieces. A sauce may be served with this dish if it is liked especially rich.

Hallbut à la Creole.

Cook two cupfuls of tomatoes twenty minutes with one cupful of water, one slice of onion, three cloves and one-half tablespoonful of sugar. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour, and stir into the hot mixture. Add three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, cook ten minutes and strain. Clean two pounds of hallbut, put into a pan, pour around it half the sauce and bake thirty-five minutes, basting often. Remove to a platter and serve with the remaining sauce.

Apple Salad.

Apples have such good flavor in a salad that they should be served in various combinations. Take two cupfuls of diced apple, a slice of Spanish onion finely diced, one-half cupful of finely diced dates and season well with good, rich, boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce.

TAILORED FROCKS FOR SCHOOL; KNITTED ENSEMBLES AND COATS

LITTLE BO PEEP, who lost her sheep and had to depend upon the silkworm and the cotton boll for wherewithal to be clothed, has found them again. All summer she let them alone, but now they've come home, have been sheared and their wool converted into frocks that are the last word in correct style. Everywhere much emphasis is placed on wool dresses, suits and costumes for fall—the college girl's outfit is made up of tweed, cheviot, twill, halbrigan and flannel, introducing also some finely patterned men's wear cloths.

There is a great variety of woolen fabrics and they are developed in tailored styles with several new features.

Ideal for School or College Girl.

tures proclaiming their up-to-dateness. Among these are the suggested shirt-bosom front, the neck line high at the back with long "V" shaped opening at the front, revealing a vestee or waistcoat, the scarf to match the belted jacket, and greater fullness in skirts. But in wool-tailored dresses this fullness is not allowed to interfere with the straight and slim silhouette. It takes the form of plaits that are only released near the hemline or are hardly to be discovered, except as they spread and fall back to place in walking. All the world of fashion has accepted this additional fullness in skirts, but not greater width in tailored things; designers ingeniously contrive to introduce it, without destroying the youthful line.

Bordered flannel makes the simple frock presented here as ideal for school or college girl. It is a slip-over model with a small vestee of white crepe-de-chine introduced at the front and narrow sash of the material tied near the front. The placing of the banding at the front is a derivation of the shirt-front idea and serves to introduce some vivid color to the best advantage. It appears on the sleeves and across the back of the collar.

Another popular pattern in wool fabrics is the hairline stripe in white on a background of strong blue, warm brown or black. Frocks of it are usually severely tailored with V-shaped front opening over vestees with high or turnover collars.

A great variety of neckwear is provided for wear with these simple tailored frocks. Vestees of crepe de chine or wash satin with either high or turnover collars—separate waistcoats, tucked net and lace in collar and cuff sets. Just now Irish crochet is very fashionable in rather wide, round collars and deep flaring cuffs. Undersleeves to be worn with flaring dress sleeves are usually made of net.

Again and yet again women of fashion are paying homage to knitted modes. Distinguished style conception linked with color glory bespeak incomparable fascination for this season's knitted frocks, suits, coats and ensembles. Not only do handsome topcoats supply a new item of interest to the already brilliant record of knitted costume, but likewise elegant and unique ensembles add a paragraph to the pages of fashion history.

We are conscious of that delightful thrill of "something different" in the luxurious knitted costumes which promise a successful vogue throughout the coming months. The picture to the right displays one of these marvelous achievements of knitted industry; namely, an ensemble costume which at first glance it is difficult to believe is knitted through and through, even to its bandings which look like real fur. This chic suit, consisting of coat and frock, is knitted of tan rayon and wool, with rust-color border and design. Brushed wool collar and cuffs give it a fur-like embellishment.

Many of us who have heretofore planned in a cloth suit for fall are going to transfer our allegiance to these suit ensembles of prepossessing appearance. They are so eminently suited to autumn wear, for their gorgeous coloring seems to respond to the gold, flame and russet of sunset and falling leaf, while there is a certain sense of comfort in the caress of soft wool, which, though never heavy-weight or cumbersome, is withal warm and protecting.

Long knitted coats styled like the one shown in the illustration are prominent in the fall collection. This particular model is knitted from red and white wool in plaid effect. Its collar and cuffs present a striking contrast in that they are of solid black brushed wool.

Myriads of ideas are expressed in these now-so-fashionable knitted coats. Some look as if of heavy brocade so skillfully are they knitted in jacquard patternings. Usually these all-over-designed coats show an arresting intermingling of colors, not infrequently contrasted with solid borderings of sheered wool which presents every aspect of fur.

Sometimes the long topcoat is plain-knit in beige or gray, red, fuchsia or green as the case may be, with a deep border of jacquard patterning featuring the hemline while "wool fur" collars and cuffs add the finishing touch.

Diversity is gained also by interknitting rayon with wool. Such is a coat of white wool in a firm plain stitch with white rayon defining fine horizontal stripes throughout.

MAKE VINEGAR OF UNEXCELLED QUALITY

Apples Are Commonly Used for Making Vinegar.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many fruit juices are well suited to vinegar making as they contain sugar in the proper proportion and other necessary or desirable substances, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Vinegar is the result of two distinct fermentation processes—an alcoholic fermentation, followed by an acetic fermentation.

Apples are most commonly used in the United States, but vinegar of unexcelled quality can be made from grapes, and very acceptable vinegar is made from oranges, peaches, persimmons, pears, berries and watermelons. Vinegar made from red raspberries will retain indefinitely the odor and flavor of the fruit, which makes it desirable for flavoring foods and beverages.

Much Material Wasted.

Fruit enough to make all the year's supply of vinegar is wasted in many homes. Surplus or inferior grades of fruit not desired for immediate use or for canning may often be turned into a useful product at a merely nominal cost. The best receptacles for making vinegar in the home are stone jars of three to six-gallon capacity. These should have straight sides and open tops and should be provided with covers. With most fruits used it is impossible to separate the juice from the pulp before the alcoholic fermentation has taken place, so a yeast inoculation is made in a mash of the fruit. The juice only may be used if it can be extracted easily. The following method, which calls for peaches, may be used, with slight variations, for any fruits.

Ripe fruit is selected. Overripe fruit may be used if decayed portions are removed. Enough peaches are used to fill a four-gallon jar about two-thirds full after they have been cut in two and crushed with a potato masher. The stones need not be removed. Mix a cake of compressed yeast with a small portion of the juice and add it to the mash. Cover the jar with a double layer of cheesecloth to keep out insects, and a cover to exclude light. Stir the mash daily. In four to six days alcoholic fermentation will be complete.

The juice is then separated from the mash by straining it through a cheesecloth, or using a hand press at the last. Return the juice to the jar with a starter in the form of vinegar. Use one part of the vinegar to four parts of juice. Cover as before. Within a few days a thin coating or film will appear on the surface. This "mother of vinegar," which is composed almost entirely of acetic bacteria, is essential for a successful fermentation. Great care, therefore, should be taken not to cause it to fall by stirring or agitation.

To Determine Acidity.

During the acetic fermentation frequent tests should be made to determine the increase in acidity. As soon as this has reached its maximum the vinegar is filtered and bottled. Canton flannel is a good material for filtering vinegar.

The strength of the vinegar can be determined roughly by tasting. When the vinegar reaches a point where it is comparable in taste to that of a good, strong vinegar, it may be regarded as complete. For accurate results a vinegar tester, in which the strength of the vinegar is determined by the volume of gas given off when bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) is treated with a measured quantity of the vinegar to be tested, should be used. Farmers' Bulletin 1424 on "Making Vinegar in the Home and on the Farm," gives a full description of this apparatus.

PIECE THAT DON'T SPOIL APPETITE

Child Is Fortunate Who Has Been Brought Up to Like Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Is your child hungry between meals or has she merely formed the habit of eating at all hours? It is easy to find the answer to this question by checking up on the kind of food she wants between meals or by observing whether or not she eats a full meal at the table without fussing. A rapidly growing child who is very active, may well have food in the middle of the forenoon and afternoon if it does not dull the appetite for regular meals, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. But the patronage of the ice-cream-cone vendor and the everlasting munching of candy, half-ripe bananas and pickles forms a vicious habit to which American children are particularly addicted. The nickels given to children for concentrated sweets might better be thrown away; they ruin appetite, digestion, disposition and good teeth. That child is fortunate who has been brought up to enjoy without question a glass of milk and a simple bread-and-butter sandwich while the neighbor's children are eating all-day suckers. An apple, orange or other fruit in season or a glass of cool fruit juice is especially desirable because it provides a part of the vitamin and mineral content of the diet needed for proper growth and good health.

Orange Juice and Bread and Butter.

French Fried Onion Has Very Mild, Sweet Flavor

French fried onions have a very mild, sweet flavor. They may be served hot or cold, and like potato chips, they may be kept for several days. If they are to be used when cold they should be fried in oil, since lard or fat which is solid at room temperature will cause them to look cloudy when no longer hot enough to keep the fat melted.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for making them:

French Fried Onions.

Shave the onions crosswise into very thin slices and separate the rings from each other. Dip these rings into the batter given below, place the dipped onions in a frying basket, keeping the rings well separated, drain thoroughly, and fry in deep fat at 400 degrees Fahrenheit until crisp and browned. Drain on soft paper, salt if necessary, and serve.

Thin Fritter Batter.

1 cup milk
1 or 2 eggs
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt

Beat salt and eggs well together, adding the flour and milk gradually and continuing to beat. This is a pop-over batter, and should be of the consistency of cream. The amount given should be sufficient for frying from one to two pounds of onions of medium size.

Fruits and Vegetables Prevent Liver Troubles

Spinach, onions, rhubarb and other foods are sometimes said to be especially good for the liver, because they will "stimulate it." It is a common belief that many liver ailments are due to a sluggish liver and that these ailments can be overcome by eating certain foods. The apparent beneficial effect of these foods is probably due to the fact that they are mildly laxative, and nutrition specialists now believe that many of the ailments ascribed to a disordered liver are really due to intestinal disturbances. Most of these ailments would be avoided if the diet were well chosen and if various health habits were established which would do away with constipation. The United States Department of Agriculture has published much information on the rational diet and how to choose it. Such facts can be found, for example, in Farmers' Bulletin 1313, entitled "Good Proportions in the Diet," which describes the five food groups, and recommends that the diet include some food from each group every day, the proportion indicated. When vegetables and fruits occupy an important place in the diet, many of the supposed liver troubles disappear.

Richest District School in the Country

Mission Beach Notes

By Mrs. F. G. Greenfield

Cleanliness means beauty and attraction. Let's clean up those empty lots to attract new guests and residents to our beach.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hunt entertained informally last Wednesday evening with a six o'clock dinner, in honor of Mrs. Hunt's birthday. A lovely cake graced the hostess place. Pink carnations with pink and blue favors, place cards and bon-bon baskets adorned the daintily appointed table. Little pink candles on imported almond dishes, surrounded with nuts, were at each guest's plate. A large candelabra lighted the guests to a delicious repast. Mrs. Hunt was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marfield, Mrs. Anna Potter, Mr. Joseph Klengel and the host and hostess. The evening was spent in playing "Monte Carlo."

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harris and family are planning a pleasure trip of inspection through the south country soon.

Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Van Dorsten, with their daughter, Mrs. Beth V. Paynter, have moved from their former residence on Ormond court to 728 Toulon court.

S. E. Landis of Pismo court has returned to his position in the Mission Beach drug store, after a pleasant two weeks' vacation.

C. C. Robertson, who has recently arrived from San Francisco with his family, has purchased property here and is looking forward to the building of his new home. He is expecting the arrival of relatives who are also contemplating making San Diego their home.

D. Donifrio of Mission Hills and formerly of Phoenix, Arizona, visited the J. D. McCoys this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Asher, with their daughter and son, Elizabeth and J. B., who have been visiting Mrs. Asher's relatives in Kennebunkport, Maine, are on their way home and expect to arrive about Nov. 6.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale, of Ormond court, have had as house guests the past week Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Balch, from Hollywood.

The new mission beach school has acquired a new volleyball for the recreation periods; also fine new shades are now in place at the long windows to keep out the bright glare of the sun. The children's lockers are in place, each child having a fine steel locker for his own use.

STOP WASTING--OR FACE PAUPERISM

By WILLIAM E. KNOX

President, American Bankers Association

William E. Knox

The American standard of living, the highest in the world, came easily in the past from the abundance of our natural wealth, but it can be maintained in the future only by drastic national economy in the use of that wealth. We have grown up to our resources. We can not afford to waste them any longer. Industrially we have got to stop wasting, but even more so have we got to stop the wastefulness of our personal habits.

The paramount challenge to education in America today calls for the effective teaching of personal economics—for education in the management of personal incomes so that they will give every individual a good living during his productive years and provide certain security for the non-productive years of his old age.

Forty-four million people, two-fifths of our population, are gainfully employed in the United States, earning more, than $60,000,000,000 annually. The management of the expenditure of this $60,000,000,000 annual pay check is the biggest and most important business in America. It has been estimated that upwards of $10,000,000,000 of this personal income is wasted annually. More than a billion, it is estimated, disappears in foolish speculation in fake schemes.

The spirit of waste in America is a heritage of the past, but today the country has more than one hundred and fourteen million people to support and no nation's resources can withstand extravagance indefinitely. An increase in population will mean a reduced average of personal wealth unless intelligent management maintains a progressively more economic utilization of the national income.

To teach our people this is the task of education and it can not begin to meet the task a moment too soon. The advance of civilization makes man's existence a more and more serious business. Human responsibilities and duties increase each year. If progress has made life more abundant it has also made it more expensive. It is impossible for most men to increase their real wages. Therefore they must meet their added responsibilities out of more economic employment of what they get.

The schools must teach our young people so to manage their own personal affairs as to insure that they will lead lives that have an economic worth to society and to themselves. Business must provide plans for its workers to enable them not only to earn but also to save so that the teaching of the schools will not prove an illusion in practice.

KEEPING WELL PREVENTING DIPHTHERIA IN CLEVELAND

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

DIPHTHERIA is one of the diseases we know all about. Bretonneau of Tours first described it as a distinct disease in 1821, over a hundred years ago. Before that time it had been confused with many other forms of sore throat and had been called "malignant sore throat," "putrid sore throat," etc. He called it diphtheria from a Greek word meaning a membrane, because in true diphtheria a membrane always forms on the infected spot. Klebs discovered the diphtheria germ in 1883 and Loeffler in 1884 first succeeded in growing the germ outside the human body.

In 1888 Roux and Yersin proved that poisoning and death in diphtheria were caused, not by the germ itself, but by the poison which the germ manufactures in its growth. In 1891 Von Behring made an antitoxin or antidote for the diphtheria poison, by which the poison caused by the disease could be neutralized and the child's life saved. In 1913 Schick found that a single drop of antitoxin, injected under the skin, would show what children were susceptible to this disease. Then Park and Zingher in New York found that children whom this test shows to be immune at two or three years of age will probably be safe from the disease for the rest of their lives, while those who are susceptible can be by a dose of toxin-antitoxin, be protected from it in all cases during childhood and in many cases for the whole of their lives.

So we know all about it, what causes it, how the germs get into the throat of the well child, how it can be prevented and how it can be cured. Yet in 1921 there were twenty thousand deaths from diphtheria in the United States, most of them children under ten years of age.

As King Edward asked, "If this disease is preventable, why is it not prevented?" Because its prevention requires action on a large scale. To protect a single child against diphtheria is good but this will not reduce the death rate. All susceptible children must be protected. The time to do this is when the child enters school. In Cleveland Doctor McClelland found that two-thirds of all children examined were susceptible and that the largest number of susceptible children were found in the well-to-do homes. Not a single child out of the 30,000 treated showed any bad effects from the antitoxin.

"Who would not give a trifle to prevent what he would give a thousand worlds to cure?" Three doses of toxin-antitoxin will protect your child from this awful disease. Don't be sorry when it is too late.
